who was threatened during a sassoonl@hertsessexnews.co.uk robbery say they fear the ordeal could leave her mentally scarred for life.

Three masked men burst into the Plume of Feathers pub on the outskirts of Harlow and threatened Sarah Godfrey (28) with a wooden pole.

One of the gang grabbed the petrified mum-of-two and ordered her to open a safe. She feared he would turn violent when she was unable to give him the key.

A customer who tried to help her was punched by one of the raiders.

Mrs Godfrey's ordeal ended when the robbers, who wore ski masks or pieces of cloth with holes cut out for eyes, decided to cut their losses and make their escape with the £700 takings. They fled in a red Mazda MX6 which was later found continued on page 3

Mrs Godfrey's mother Barbara and brother Stuart, who have run the pub for almost six years, now fear she will not recover from the trauma of her ordeal.

"I would have rather they had come to me and asked me for the money themselves so I could have given it to them without it affecting my sister," said Stuart

"She hasn't really spoken about it but she is all over the place. I worry about what affect it has had on her. It could scar her for life."

The robbers burst into the pub in Gilston shortly before 10pm on Sunday when half-a-dozen customers were enjoying a quiet drink.

Fed Up with HARLOW Traffic?

"There is little worse than sitting in traffic jams driving in and out of Harlow day after day. Enough is enough. I will work tirelessly for a new junction 7a from the M11 to reduce traffic across Harlow."

Robert Halfon, Prospective Conservative MP

We desperately need a new relief road and an extra junction on the M11. Now is the time for action.

Our proposal is to construct a northern relief road and an extra junction on the M11.

The aim is to extend the A414 from the Eastwick/Fifth Avenue roundabout towards the A1184 and on to the M11 at a new junction 7A.

We are 'fed-up' with Harlow traffic and would like to make a difference. We say enough is enough.

We, the undersigned strongly urge the government to construct a northern relief road with an extra junction (7A) on the M11.

We further believe that this is just part of infrastructure that is desperately needed before 1000's of houses are built on our countryside.

Advantages of a Northern Relief Road to a new Junction 7A on the M11

- The route is relatively short so the environmental impact is extremely limited.
- The road would not be visually intrusive. It would be built on a mix of derelict industrial land and old gravel pits. It would be overlooked only from the Templefields industrial area.
- Noise will be restricted because the route would be contained within the narrow Stort Valley.
- Access to Harlow's industrial areas will be significantly improved.
- Extending the route to the M11 could ease traffic through Sawbridgeworth.
- A new junction on the M11 will relieve the excessive pressure on the existing junction.

Stephen Hammond, MP, Conservative Shadow Transport spokesman, (pictured left with Robert) visited Harlow last week and said, "I am delighted to be here in Harlow looking at the traffic issues affecting the town.

Having witnessed the traffic jams for myself today, it is quite clear that Harlow has a number of particular traffic problems and therefore I am delighted to support the campaign and web site that Robert has set up.

> I will be working with Robert to lobby the Government to recognise these problems and take action."

Drink and grief to blame for death threat

A MAN who threatened to kill his ex-partner has escaped a jail sentence.

Judge Anthony Goldstaub QC gave Roy Dare a two year conditional discharge for the "foolish threat" he made after getting carried away by drink.

Dare (46), of Northbrooks, Harlow, pleaded guilty to making threats to kill. Chelmsford Crown Court heard on Tuesday he had been drinking in a Waltham Abbey pub in January and told another man he would kill Josephine Bush. Daniel Jones, in mitigation, said Dare made the threat because he was upset about the breakdown of his nine year relationship and the death of his mother. Judge Goldstaub said Dare had already served 96 days in prison for harassment and the time had allowed him to "cool his heels and concentrate his mind.'

"I just don't know how they (the raiders) had the front to do it when there were people in here," she said. "I hope those responsible are caught before they can put anybody else through the same thing."

Detective Sergeant Tim Johnson, of Hertfordshire Constabulary, said: "There were a number of people in the pub at the time and would urge anyone with information or who were in the area and believe they saw a car matching the description of the vehicle used by the offenders to contact police.

OAPs tricked

BOGUS callers conned their way into the homes of two elderly women on the same day. A 95-year-old in Gibb Croft, Harlow, and a 77-year-old in Spencers Croft, Harlow, were both targeted in separate incidents on Monday. The 95year-old had her purse stolen but nothing was taken from the 77-year-old's home.

Frank's killers in sentence appeal

Strikers picket sorting office

POSTAL services in Harlow have again been crippled by industrial action in the ongoing dispute between Royal Mail and the Communication Workers Union.

Disgruntled postal workers joined a picket line outside the sorting office in Post Office Road before dawn on Monday as the protest against Royal Mail's modernisation plans rumbled on.

Although senior CWU representatives and Royal Mail chiefs have been in intensive talks to resolve the union's grievances concerning potential job losses, pay and contractual obligations, negotiations have now reached a stalemate – prompting angry workers to take yet more industrial action.

CWU Essex Amalgamated branch secretary John Hunt told the Star members feel "disgust" at the way they have been treated throughout the dispute.

He added: "Although the CWU has presented Royal Mail management with a number of viable options for compromise throughout the dispute, they remain insistent that their model for modernisation is the only feasible way forward, which is an insult to the intelligence of our members and will see massive job losses and pay cuts.'

Royal Mail, however, complained that the union continues to table "unrealistic proposals".

Chief executive Adam Crozier said: "We simply want our people to work the hours they are already paid to work across the working week."

■ LINDSEY Street and Allnuts Road post offices in Epping have been earmarked for closure under restructuring plans which will see thousands of branches shut in the UK.

A consultation until November 19 will give people affected by the proposed closures one last chance to save their branch by mobilising enough opposition. To take part, write to Sheila McCann, Network Development Manager, FREEPOST Consultation Team, or email consultation@postoffice.co.uk.

But Mr Hume disputed the £86,000 cost and said it represented a tiny fraction of the money County Hall is spending on Harlow's roads this year.

"We carry out schemes of this type according to strictly laid down criteria based on need and the quality of the existing road surface," he said. "The council has completed over half-a-dozen road surfacing schemes in Harlow already this year on major routes such as the A414 and Second Avenue, with further schemes to follow including Fourth Avenue

Harlow Star: 40,781 (January-June 2007). Part of the Harlow Star/Bishop's Stortford series, Double first for new twins club

PARENTS of twins are hoping for twice the benefit when they share tips and advice as well as make friends at a new club in Harlow.

The newly formed twins club met for the first time at Tye Green Community Centre in Bush Fair last week and will be holding another meeting today (Thursday).

It has been set up by friends Donna Boon, of Willowfield, and Tash Wilson, of Waterhouse Moor, who want to help other parents and mums-to-be avoid some of the uncertainties they faced before and after giving birth to twins.

Donna's sons Teddy and Bobby are now 21 months, while Tash's lads Owen and Billy recently celebrated their second birthday. "We first came up with the idea of starting a club last year and the Star ran a small article asking for mums of twins to get in touch," said Donna.

"We had quite a few people contact us and since then we have all met up a few times. Now we have finally got round to starting a proper group."

The pair advertised the club with posters in schools and GP surgeries around the town. They hope that as word spreads, more people will join the gettogethers.

"The idea is for the mums of the older children to pass on their experience and advice," said Donna. "As a mother of twins, when you talk to mothers of single babies they often say that they understand but they don't! A lot of things are very different. "At the twins club, mums and dads of twins can come along and speak to others who are in the same boat as them."

The club runs each Thursday from 1.15-2.45pm. Admission is £2.50 per family to cover costs.

Volunteer plea to help the homeless

NEWLY-formed homeless charity Streets2Homes is looking for a volunteer funding co-ordinator to help it secure the funds it needs to operate.

The Wych Elm-based charity, which was formed from a merger of Harlow Homeless Centre and Harlow Accommodation Project, hopes to recruit a committed person with some free time on their hands. The ideal candidate is someone with previous fundraising experience, but the centre will accept help from anyone who feels they can make a contribution.

Funding boost

A CONFIDENCE-building scheme for black people and members of ethnic minorities has been awarded £1,870 in funding.

The Festiva Club, which runs sessions at Rainbow Services in Wych Elm, Harlow, has received the windfall from the Community Champion Fund.

Spokeswoman Margaret Lumu said: "Research has found that many individuals from ethnic minority backgrounds do not get involved in what goes on in the mainstream community because of a lack of confidence.

"Our sessions equip individuals who have lost their self-esteem and confidence with a tool to get back on their feet and do something about their situations."

Traffic lights fault causes roads chaos

FAULTY traffic lights caused road chaos in Harlow yesterday (Wednesday) for the second time in two weeks. Queues of traffic formed on the A414 as drivers were forced to wait to get onto the Hastingwood roundabout.

The queues had a knockon effect around the town with motorists heading out of Church Langley having to wait up to halfan-hour to get out of the estate and southbound traffic coming off the M11 caught up in queues which stretched for up to two miles.

An Essex County Council spokesman confirmed to the Star that an electrical fault was the cause of the problem.

Strike threat to post votes

PEOPLE intending to take part in this month's two Harlow by-elections by using postal votes are being warned they may have to hand-deliver their completed forms because of the on-going Post Office strikes.

Council chiefs are worried that walkouts which have hit this week's postal deliveries will mean many votes will not arrive in time.

A council spokesman said: "Further postal strike action could affect the return of postal votes. Electors are advised to hand deliver their postal votes to the elections office at the Latton Bush Centre in Southern Way if further strikes take place. "They can also be handed in at the Civic Centre and also at any polling station within the relevant ward by 10pm on the election day (October 25)."

One of the teenagers, who lives in Harlow, reported the incident to police who are now hoping to get CCTV images of the attackers.

Signs for the future

BABIES were quite literally given a helping hand to communicate when they took part in a 'sing and sign' workshop at Old Harlow library.

The morning session saw a dozen nine- to 18-month-olds taught how to make words by using hand signals. Although many of the youngsters were too young to form the hand gestures themselves, it is believed that familiarising them with signs and words at an early age will help them grasp the rules of communication more readily later on.

The children were also sung rhymes, shown puppets and given percussion instruments.

WE SAY

S our roads fall to bits with new potholes, ruts and broken kerbs appearing every day, it must be a good time to be in the car suspension components business.

But it's hardly reassuring to know that Essex County Council is on the case, improving the least-used dead end streets in our town.

Yes, that's right: while major routes and busy estate thoroughfares disintegrate into gravel, the county has been busy ensuring that Fernhill Lane, a road which virtually noone uses, is as smooth as an infant's posterior.

This could be said to demonstrate the problem of Harlow's remoteness from the Chelmsford-centric County Hall administration.

Maybe it's time for responsibilities such as road maintenance to be delegated back to district councils which, one would hope, would be less prone to such expensive

SIR, Robert Halfon's campaign to secure an A414 bypass for Harlow will be welcomed by residents and road users alike.

At rush hour the traffic congestion along the A414 from the Eastwick Lodge roundabout to the Hastingwood roundabout is intolerable.

It just does not make sense for Harlow residents to be caught in this daily bottleneck or for industrial and commercial traffic to wend its way through our town to either the M11 or A10 or to shuttle between Chelmsford and Hertford.

Harlow needs a bypass now. The A414 extension from Eastwick Lodge to a new junction on the M11 was agreed as practical and as achieving the necessary objectives of both Hertfordshire and Essex county councils in 1990. It is misleading of Bill Rammell to suggest that a bypass could only be funded by supporting the development of Harlow North.

As the secretary of STOP Harlow North stated on these pages last week, the provision of major infrastructure should be paid for by the Government out of general taxation. It would not have been lost on Mr Rammell's constituents that Gordon Brown increased petrol duty by 2p per litre last

As a plumber, I drive back and forth along the A414 on a regular basis so I know how bad it can get. Other towns and villages get bypasses so I don't know why Harlow should be treated any differently.

It is wrong of Mr Rammell to blackmail us into backing his obsession with building more and more houses around Harlow. As our MP he should be persuading Gordon Brown to ease Harlow's road congestion with a bypass to

Stop spin

SIR, I realise that up until the weekend it was election fever, but I do urge Bill Rammell to stick to political argument rather than resorting to cheap tricks (Letters, October 4).

Contrary to what he wrote last week, he knows that I do live in the Harlow constituency and am also a parish councillor. It is noticeable that letters from Bill or other Labour supporters about me have, in recent weeks, become more personal and vitriolic.

One of the reasons why people have so little faith in politicians from all parties is because they resort to cheap tricks and petty stunts. That is why Gordon Brown's spinning about the date of the election so spectacularly backfired.

What members of the public in Harlow want is a real debate on the issues rather than lies or half truths. That is why the whole basis of my campaign to make life better in Harlow and the surrounding villages has been based on focusing on local matters that people really care about such as a northern relief road from the M11, supporting our homeless centre, protecting our NHS walk-in centre from cuts and supporting our Green Belt. For a number of years I have worked - and will continue to work - tirelessly as an unpaid volunteer for Harlow, campaigning on issues such as these. I don't have a Government car or claim expenses; I just believe in doing everything I can to transform the lives of people in Harlow for the better.

So, Mr Rammell, I expect you to fiercely debate with me local and national issues and I look forward to the challenge. But if you are the decent and honest politician that people expect you to be, cut out the cheap political or personal attacks

Robert Halfon Conservative prospective MP for Harlow Latton Bush Centre, Harlow

We do care

SIR, I was deeply hurt to read on your letters page an accusation that politicians, especially councillors, do not give any thought to the homeless.

In the same edition I read that Bill Rammell had helped to secure a £10,000 grant for the organisation Streets2Homes. He would now be built and operating. has also visited the centre to talk to staff and homeless people. By coincidence, I then received a telphone call from Bill James who organises The Chocolate Run which takes food and drink to the homeless in London. He invited me to meet others who had worked for it in the past to celebrate it achieving 35 years. He added it would be a good opportunity to discuss whether I would be a volunteer at the Christmas shelter this year as I had done last year.

I think your correspondent should have checked his facts before writing.

Councillor Edna Stevens Fullers Mead, Harlow

Sport fears

SIR, As a frequent user of the Sportcentre and swimming pool, I am not surprised the pool has closed due to the lack of recent adequate maintenance and that it is very unlikely to reopen due to the proposed future demolition.

A lot of public funds were invested when the swimming pool and the sports centre complex were built and they are both soon to be demolished as part of the Harlow Gateway Project.

The replacement building currently under construction on the Harlow College playing fields will not provide anything like the same amount of accommodation or facilities of the existing buildings

The news that Harlow Council's planning committee has granted outline planning approval for a further 220 dwellings to be built as part of the re-development of the Sportcentre site has, at a stroke, increased the development value of the land but to whose benefit?

Potential traffic problems and the housing density issues have apparently been ignored by the committee or is it reluctant to refuse the additional homes in case there is an appeal and the council incurs costs?

While I approve of the building of genuinely affordable homes for young people, I believe it to be wrong that the future residents of this development will be paying for the replacement sports centre as part of their rent or mortgage repayments.

If further development on land in and around Harlow goes ahead, the increase in population will prove that to build such inadequate sports facilities will be seen as a big mistake.

Service safe

SIR, The Harlow Walk-In Centre is a very important part of addressing the health needs of local residents. It is very popular and gives a clinically excellent

As we have stated in the past the service will not close. A group of hospital doctors, GPs and managers from West Essex PCT, Princess Alexandra Hospital and the Harlow GP practice based commissioning group have been working together to look at when and why people use the walk-in centre and A&E. Their work forms the basis of the consultation that is currently under way.

The group did consider the option of closing the walk-in centre but quickly rejected it as it would be detrimental to people who use it. We also know from people who use the centre how good the service is.

The centre has contingency procedures should an event beyond our control happen. It is there to protect staff and make sure that patient safety is never compromised. The plan has been implemented on very few occasions in the past and certainly not recently.

On September 28, for five hours, one nurse was on duty due to unplanned staff absence. The nurse was supported by a health care assistant and the situation was closely monitored by the service manager who was at the site for the whole time. The contingency plans did not have to be put into action.

Services at the walk-in centre are certainly not being wound down. In fact, we are looking at ways to make better use of the services provided. This is part of the consultation that is currently under way.

The consultation is all about listening to people's views and comments about proposals to enhance the walk-in centre service. We want to hear local people's views as part of the consultation.

I would like to reiterate the walkin centre service is not closing. On the contrary, we plan to develop and improve it to better suit local people's needs.

Ballot blues

SIR, So Gordon Brown has bottled out of his intention to cash in on the Brown Bounce. Unfortunately his bounce went flat at the first encounter with David Cameron.

What a shame. We really wanted to give him a drubbing and get it over with. Now it looks as though he has run for cover and is going to put the nation to task for another excruciating year or two while he bleeds us dry.

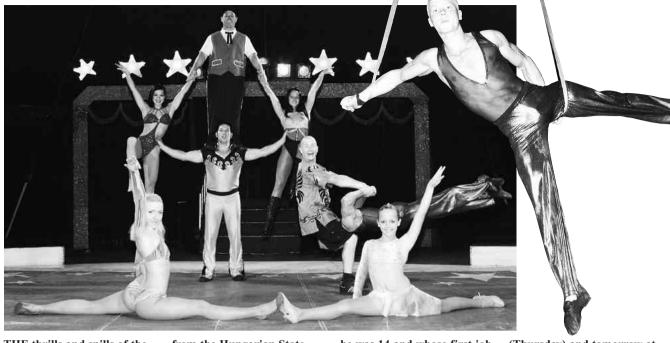

The losers, of course, will be the nation as Brown's government slides into more and more debt while law and order continues out of control, family breakdown inflicts more misery on those least able to cope and towns like Harlow become swamped by more and more housing of greater and greater density

We will be there next spring, next summer, next autumn, and the year after and the year after that while he clings on to the last days of power like some bunkered dictator. We are ready any time, Mr Brown.

Councillor acts on theatre fears

A CAMPAIGN is under way to save Harlow's Playhouse theatre, despite council assurance's the venue is not under threat.

Independent councillor John Paul Goddard, who sits on the Playhouse Working Party, has started a Save The Playhouse crusade following the suspension of theatre manager Phil Dale.

Mr Goddard claims he has not been told by the council why Mr Dale was removed from his post.

"My biggest fear is the Liberal Democrat/Labour administration currently running the council is preparing to downsize, scale-down or even close The Playhouse and the suspension of the theatre manager serves as Act One to this process," he told the Star this week.

"The people of this town and the elected members will not stand idly by and watch Harlow Playhouse, the jewel in the crown, be turned into a political football."

Mr Goddard has called for the public to support him in asking the council to immediately reinstate Mr Dale and to lobby against further cuts.

Meanwhile, the council has also come under fire from its former head of arts Laurence Sach, who criticised officers' handling of the crisis at a time the continued operation of The when the theatre is approaching pan- Playhouse and its staffing.

By BEN WILKINSON Chief Reporter wilkinsonb@hertsessexnews.co.uk

OPPOSITION parties in Harlow have torn into Prime Minister Gordon Brown for backing out of an early General Election, with one candidate accusing him of treating Britain's democratic system "like a toy".

Political parties were on feverish election alert after the PM and his team appeared to be laying the groundwork to capitalise on favourable opinion polls and go to the country in November.

Leaflets were reported to be piled high in Conservative HQ, in Southern Way, Harlow, and the town's Liberal Democrats were preparing to appoint a fast-track Parliamentary candidate if an election was

But after weeks of failing to quash the speculation, and facing the lastest opinion polls suggesting a Tory lead after a successful Conservative conference week, Mr Brown announced on Saturday he would not be calling an election after all.

Harlow Conservative Parliamentary candidate Robert Halfon branded the move an example of the kind of spin that has so damaged the political process and public confidence in politicians during New Labour's decade in power.

"This is worse than anything Tony Blair would have dared try," he fumed. "We're blessed in this country with our democracy, it's not something to be treated like a toy – but that's exactly how he has treated it.

Ben gives listeners a lowdown on town

NATIONAL radio listeners got an insight into how General Election fever was affecting Harlow when a member of the Star news team was interviewed live.

Chief reporter Ben Wilkinson was quizzed on BBC Radio Five Live as the programme analysed how speculation of a possible early poll had affected marginal constituencies. The interview took place on Friday - a day before the PM ruled out an early poll - and followed a report by BBC journalist Stephen Chittenden in which he spoke to Conservative Parliamentary candidate Robert Halfon about his campaign.

Ben was asked about senior Government and opposition figures including Mr Brown and Tory leader David Cameron - who have visited Harlow in recent weeks and months, as well as the advertisements Mr Halfon has been placing in local newspapers.

Afterwards, he said: "I thought it was great for Harlow to get that kind of national profile.

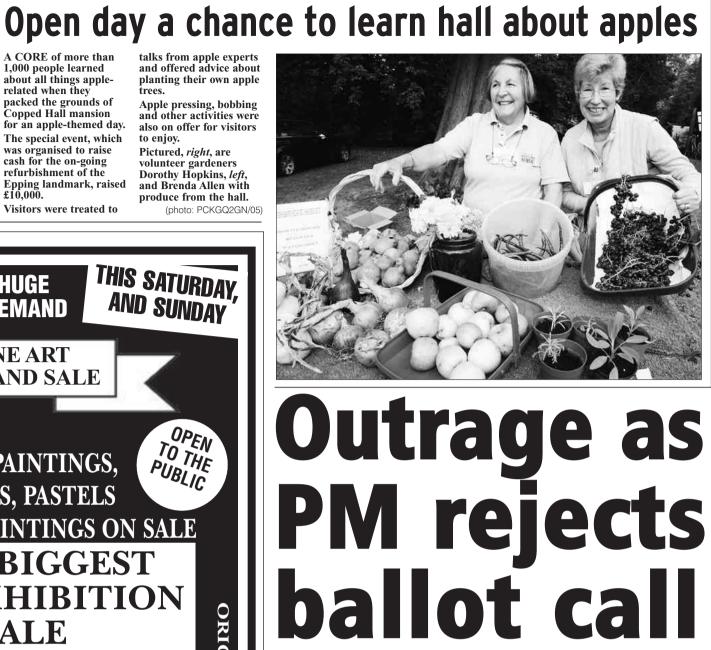

"Radio Five live is a serious news provider and when its journalists needed an insight into Harlow, it was the Star that was their first port of call. I think that's a real vote of confidence in our work.'

Brown thought he was being clever doing all along because of the onset of cold weathregister problems highlighted in last week's

A Galaxy of music, fun and friendship

BÉN WILKINSON

ARELY a week goes by these days without The Square featuring in the Star's news pages.

The Fourth Avenue music venue has recently been granted a reprieve, although its long-term future still appears depressingly

Because of this – and because Nostalgia has been desperate for an opportunity to use this photograph from the Star archives of thencouncillor Bill Rammell having a rock 'n' roll moment in 1990 with local band The Cyclone – we've decided to revisit some memories of the place.

Most of The Square's punters particularly since the county council removed its bar earlier this year – are youngsters. But, as regulars will tell you, this isn't always the case and 72year-old grandmother Cyndy Brennan, of Roman Vale, Old Harlow, popped in just a few months ago.

"My 16-year-old granddaughter Kirsty Brough goes there with many of her friends and went to the Rock School," she explained.

"I went to the rock evening in April and was so impressed by all the youngsters who had worked so hard for that event. I also hadn't realised how hard all the staff work and what they actually do for the youngsters of Harlow." But Mrs Brennan's association with The Square goes much further back than April – back in the 1960s, she was one of the women who got The Galaxy, as it was then, up and running.

It was originally built as a social club for the Young Women's Christian Association hostel next door and over the years morphed into the area's leading music venue.

"Molly White was the main person who got the Galaxy going and I was one of the women who helped her," recalled Mrs Brennan. "There were a few of us but the only names I remember are Jo and Betty.

"A lot of bikers used to come there at one time. I remember one evening,

Princess Alexandra Hospital rang us and asked if we could get any of them to help with the 'blood run' to Brighton. I have never seen teenagers go so fast - they just stopped what they were doing and went to the

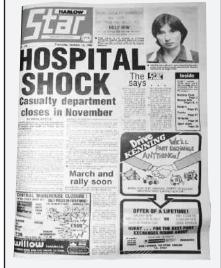

Liz Newman, who still subscribes to the Star despite now living in Ringwood, Ĥampshire, was also involved in the early days of The Galaxy and remembers Molly White. "When we arrived in Harlow in 1966 we knew nobody, so I joined the Young Wives Group at The Galaxy," she said. "I met some wonderful people.

"I so hope that the Galaxy – or Square as it is now – is allowed to remain so that many more great friendships can be made there in the vears to come.

25 YEARS AGO

October 14, 1982

HOSPITAL SHOCK

A SHOCK decision to close the casualty department and Penn Ward at Princess Alexandra Hospital was made on Friday by the health authority.

At an emergency meeting, the measures were approved in the hope they would save £132,000 by the end of March 1983. At the end of August, the authority was already more than £90,000 in the red and it expects to make a loss of £270,000 by the end of the year unless cuts are made.

YOUNGSTERS ON THE DOLE

YOUNG people in Harlow who are lucky enough to have a job are now in a minority. The sad news was highlighted by Councillor Sandra Edwards at last week's Harlow Council meeting.

Harvey's changing face

THIS looks out of place, doesn't it? But 20 years ago, when this photograph was taken, Henry Moore's Family Group was sited in the shadow of the Harvey Possibly the most famous of Harlow's many sculptures, Family Group has been in a few different locations over the years and is now in the Civic Centre. But the real reason for the picture is to once again appeal for your memories of the construction and early days of the Harvey Centre, which celebrates is silver jubilee in December.

If you have any memories to add, please write to us at Nostalgia.

Doubled visions in Harlowscope

A NEWS feature in the Star last month looked back at the Harlow Co-operative Film Society with the help of one of its key members, Ron Bill.

Mr Bill, who was involved with the club from 1956 until it was wound up in 1993, has since been in contact with Nostalgia about a novel innovation which wasn't mentioned in our piece.

"For the 1970 Harlow Arts Festival I launched 'Harlowscope', two screens alongside each other with two films showing simultaneously," he said.

'I timed it so there was always one screen in action as the films changed. We did it at the Stone Cross Hall – now Liquid – and it was great fun!"

Mr Bill also told Nostalgia he is hopeful that next year the society can be resurrected after its 15-year hiatus: "The Harlow College cinema room is due for completion in January and I will then be invited to talk about a possible film society and, hopefully, some daytime shows.'

Anyone wishing to get involved can contact Mr Bill on (01279) 434997.

Emanuel's style comes to Harlow

By CHRIS MOSS mossc@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A HIGH street clothes store was given a dazzling makeover when flambovant designer-to-the-stars David Emanuel unveiled his new autumn collection in Harlow.

The renowned dressmaker hosted a glitzy launch party at Bonmarché's Broad Walk store on Thursday to showcase his first foray into the lucrative world of high street fashion. Famed for designing Princess Diana's glamorous wedding gown, Mr Emanuel has spent many years dressing stars of the screen including Elizabeth Taylor and Jane Seymour — and now wants to bring haute couture to the masses

"I've been approached before about designing a collection for a high street store but it has never felt like the right time until now," he said.

"I relished the opportunity to work with Bonmarché as it seemed like a tremendous challenge. After dinner with the main man Richard Kirk, I decided to take it up.

"To be honest, I'd never even heard of the store before they approached me and when I visited one of the shops I realised the collections could do with a breath of fresh air. There are a lot of older, larger women out there who feel they have nowhere to go to buy glamorous, fashionable clothes – we can now offer them a solution to their dilemma"

But it is not only larger ladies who will benefit from the designs – the collection of smart day and elegant evening wear caters for sizes 10 to 20 and Mr Emanuel was keen to point out there is something for everyone.

"This is a classic collection with a contemporary edge; women young and old can look equally fabulous wearing it," he explained. "The response has already been fantastic and I look forward to designing new collections as the seasons change

Trade association plaudits for tile trainer

A TILING training provider in Harlow has plastered the competition to become the firstever firm of its kind to be recognised by top industry trade body The Tile Association.

PTS Training, in Bush Fair, is the country's leading provider of intensive tiling courses and won the coveted accreditation for its unique four-week training programme.

Designed to ensure anyone can learn the skills to take up the profession, the comprehensive short course is the first to be accredited by the trade body after it recognised the fact that PTS trainees met the stringent professional standards the accolade demands.

TTA chairman David Forbes said: "The Tile Association is representative of the finest companies within the industry. We work together to encourage the best use of materials and construction techniques.

"Following several meetings with PTS, we are confident that they share the TTA's values in promoting the best practice and use of quality materials, and together we can encourage more individuals to become tilers." PTS directors Mark Humphreys and George Liddington have campaigned extensively for the accreditation in recent years and were overjoyed when the TTA board finally recognised the quality of their courses.

"This is a real coup for us – we are ecstatic!" said Mr Humphreys. "Lots of people in the industry are suspicious of four-week tiling courses until the exact nature of the courses are explained to them or they meet one of our trainees

"I look forward to a warm and fruitful relationship with the TTA. It does important work for our industry and I am very proud that PTS is now associated with it.'

Moore than meets the eye

A PHOTOGRAPHIC exhibition MOORE FOR YOU: Pictured celebrating renowned British artist Henry Moore's special relationship with Harlow has been unveiled to staff and clients at Pearson Education. The firm, in Edinburgh Way, mounted the fascinating exhibition in conjunction with the Henry Moore Foundation to show the artist's love of the Finance firm on the move

A MORTGAGE and financial specialist has made a move of its own after relocating to smart new premises in Old Harlow.

Genesis Financial Services can now be found in High Street in its newly refurbished, customerfriendly premises after moving out of the town centre. Partner Colin Chapman said: "We have been looking to relocate in the old town for a while and the new offices provide the perfect opportunity to continue our customary high levels of service in nicer surroundings."

Wonderful Thai food for discerning diners

SANUK, High Ongar's prestigious Thai restaurant, celebrated its third birthday recently.

In that time, the restaurant has achieved a notable reputation as a choice venue for the discerning diner looking for excellent food in a relaxed and enjoyable setting

Situated only a few miles from Harlow at High Ongar, just off the A414, Sanuk is set in a charming, olde world, timber-framed building with a great deal of atmosphere.

A comprehensive menu of freshly-cooked Thai cuisine includes red and green curries, 'weeping tiger', sea bass, lobster and a variety of tempting beef, chicken and prawn dishes – all with the appropriate accompaniments. This is complimented by a carefully-chosen and exclusive fine wine list.

Along with its growing number of regular diners, Sanuk caters for business lunches, family parties, and other special occasions. There is a special set menu on Sundays priced at just £10.95 for adults and £4.95 for children.

Sanuk is open Monday to Saturday from 12 noon-2pm at lunchtime and in the evenings from 5.30pm-11pm. On Sundays, the restaurant is open all day, from 12noon until 10pm and there is a special Oriental menu available.

Witness appeal after spate of handbag thefts

POLICE are appealing for witnesses after four women had their handbags snatched by a bikeriding thief.

Cash, credit cards and other valuables were taken in each of the separate attacks in Harlow last

The most recent saw a woman robbed of her bag as she walked along a cycle track in Church Leys. In another attack, a victim fell over while being accosted in Police now want to speak with two men who chased the robber after an attack in Nicholsfield estate.

Detective constable Dixie Dean said: "We ask that people remain vigilant and report any suspicious activity. We particularly appeal for the two men who kindly gave chase on the second incident to contact us. They may have witnessed this event or may have vital information that could assist us bring this offender to justice." The first victim was walking in a cycle track in Waterhouse Moor, Harlow, at 11:05am last Monday when police say a man aged about 30, dressed in black and riding a dark-coloured bike snatched her brown Mui Mui handbag containing a black purse, cash, cards and various documents.A further two attacks happened on Tuesday in Tumbler Road on the Nicholsfield estate and near Manor Hatch. The last reported attack happened last Wednesday in Church Leys.

Anyone with information should call Harlow police on (01279) 641212.

Opponents dig in to defeat super-school

Poster children for recycling

THE art of recycling has been promoted by Harlow Council in a new scheme encouraging residents to make a bigger effort.

A poster by siblings Harry (10), Aimee (8) and William (7) Tennison, of Primrose Field, Harlow, depicts colourful images of the world and recyclable items and carries the message 'Recycle Now - See the World Tomorrow'.

The poster has been reproduced on the sides of the council's recycling van, which is used to transport equipment for promotional events.

Harlow is one of the worstperforming districts in Essex for household recycling.

Council street and scene waste strategy manager Kathy May said: "The message will be seen across the town when the van is out and about.

"The poster illustrates the importance of recycling with a very powerful message and it's pleasing to see that young children are aware of how important it is that we recycle now for a better future." For more information about improving your recycling, call (01279) 446655.

A MULTI-million pound By JIM TANFIELD super-school proposed for tanfieldj@hertsessexnews.co.uk super-school proposed for Harlow has met with renewed opposition from campaigners after a meeting with education chiefs.

The Save Passmores Action Group met with Essex County Council chiefs to discuss the £20m project - which is earmarked for completion in 2011 and will see Passmores school move to the site of the soon-tobe-closed Brays Grove school.

SPAG representatives hoped the discussion would answer their concerns about the school and its potentially detrimental impact on education in the town.

But the meeting, which followed months of campaigning by the group to get the deal halted and preserve education in its neighbourhood, only raised further speculation about whether there is any public support for the plans and whether funds would be found.

Speaking after meeting with county council education chief Tracey Chapman, SPAG spokesman Jim Rogers said: "We put our view that only one super-school would inevitably create a two-tier system of secondary education in Harlow, with consequent knock-on effects among the primary schools.

"It is notable that this view was not disputed during the meeting and it also became very clear that no funding presently exists for the project.

"We have been unable in over two years to find any local body of opinion that supported the move.

Mr Rogers added that people working to improve education in the town should make sure all Harlow schools received "equal investment and progressed together"

Passmores headteacher Vic Goddard said there is a lot of support for the school and its facilities.

A County Hall spokesman said: "ECC is committed to providing high quality educational facilities and to ensuring all young people in the county have access to an excellent education.

"ECC intends to fund the move of Passmores onto the Brays Grove site through its capital receipts, although some of this will require approval from the Secretary of State and may take time. This funding will not affect the finance that is available to other schools under the Building Schools for the Future programme. The financial arrangements have not been finally agreed but we are confident that this will happen by early 2008.

70U walk along the street eating a sandwich, take a last swig of cola and idly toss the empty can in the general direction of a litter bin, then hear the clatter of aluminium on concrete as it misses.

You're in a rush to an appointment and so reluctantly decide to leave your litter – but just as you turn away from the scene of your petty crime, a booming voice from out of nowhere orders you to pick up the can and place it in the nearest bin.

Your cheeks flush crimson as you stoop in shame to make amends for your misdemeanour — all the while being watched by disapproving shoppers amid a chorus of tut-tutting and you're still wondering where the intimidating voice came from.

It might sound like a minor Orwellian nightmare but this is the Government's talking closed circuit television initiative at work in Harlow town centre today.

Love it or loathe it, the fact that Big Brother (or more accurately, The Harvey Centre security team) is watching you has never been clearer. With four new Audio Cams worth £25,000 of Home Office funding strategically positioned in Harlow and a fifth soon to be installed, security officers now have the ability to give you a verbal ticking off almost anywhere in the town centre.

Operated on behalf of Harlow Council by the shopping centre's security officers from a control room on site, the town's sprawling CCTV network is certainly impressive if not a little unnerving.

Talking cameras are making a difference

Camera eye on crime

SINCE their installation, the system has;

- been used a total of42 times;
- helped combat 11 litter offences and 12 alcohol-related incidents;
- stopped three town centre brawls;
- been used 14 times to disperse large gatherings of youths, largely in the Playhouse Square area where skateboarding is a problem;
- stopped other incidents, including warning people that their suspected drug deal was being monitored.

Having recently switched to digital equipment and now recording directly onto a hard drive instead of the grainy VHS footage of old, the quality and clarity of the images recorded is startling. Officers can zoom in for close-ups of offenders and pick up minute details that may otherwise go unnoticed.

But before cynics shake their heads and start sounding off about totalitarianism, privacy rights and the 'nanny' state, does this controversial and expensive new equipment actually make any difference to levels of crime and anti-social behaviour? One man better placed than most to answer that question is Harvey Centre security manager Simon Plumb, and he's adamant that it does. "We have managed to break up fights before they've begun, disperse crowds of loitering youths and stopped people from dropping litter," he said. "It really is a useful tool to help curb anti-social behaviour and environmental crime in the EYE ON THE TOWN: Top, Star reporter Chris Moss town.

"We have a strict set of protocols to follow when using the devices, including a set series of messages we give out over the loudspeaker depending on the type of disturbance. and all verbal warnings are automatically recorded to disk.

"The Audio Cams have also proved very effective in shaming people who have deliberately committed an offence. The messages make it very clear who we are issuing the warning to and for what reason, and if there are other people near the scene it can be an especially useful and embarrassing deterrent." Indeed, figures released by the council add weight to Mr Plumb's assertion that the Audio Cams, which were installed in May, are having a positive impact.

sited in The High

"We will warn people about to start a fight, for example, that if they do the police will be immediately notified," said Mr Plumb. "If people are given a clear reminder they are being monitored by CCTV, they are usually more reluctant to commit or continue committing an offence

"I understand why some people are concerned by the number of CCTV cameras found in our town centres today, but I find it reassuring to know that there are security officers effectively watching your back and helping to make the streets a safer place for everyone.

"I have personally used one of the Audio Cams to advise a woman who was very ill in the town centre that paramedics were on their way to assist her,' added Mr Plumb. "It's not just there to stamp out the negative elements of society - it's also there to offer help in emergency situations.

a disaster scenario in Harlow town centre, we can use all of the Audio Cams simultaneously to advise people of the nd safety does not situation and evacuate them as appropriate. Tories hedging bets on airport expansion

By BEN WILKINSON Chief Reporter wilkinsonb@hertsessexnews.co.uk

CAMPAIGNERS were left with mixed feelings as a top Tory MP ruled out a second runway Stansted Airport under a future Conservative government but refused to make a commitment to halt expansion on the existing site.

Shadow transport minister Stephen Hammond visited Roydon on Thursday to set out Conservative policy on the Essex airport.

He told a press conference a new runway was not necessary and would devastate communities around Stansted.

But while party activists and the Stop Stansted Expansion campaigners who packed the village's White Hart pub for the announcement expressed delight at the promise, there was undisguised disappointment that Mr Hammond did not go further and propose a moratorium on any increase in flights.

"There is no justification for a second runway; the economic case has not been made at all," he said. "We've also looked at the environmental issues and, above all, listened to what the local people are saying in coming to this decision.'

But asked by the Star about his party's position on Stansted owner BAA's plans to significantly increase the number of flights using the existing runway - currently the subject of a public - Mr Hammond was clearly out of step with local thinking.

"One of the reasons we're absolutely convinced there should be no new runway is that there could, if necessary, be better utilisation of the existing site," he said. "That capacity should be used before any expansion is considered.'

He added: "The Conservatives are neither pro- nor anti-aircraft, pro- nor anti-rail or car - we just want a transport system that works in the 21st century."

Stop Stansted Expansion deputy chairman Norman Mead pleaded with Mr Hammond to rethink his position.

"I welcome this policy statement about no second runway," he said. "But we believe enough is enough."

He said people living in Stansted's midst had been the victims of "insidious incrementalism", adding: "This has been going on for 40 years and it's more than any society or community should contend with.'

Reacting to Mr Hammond's announcement, a spokesman for BAA said: "We can only work towards what government policy is currently and at the moment Government policy is that there should be a second runway at Stansted.'

Following the press conference, Mr Hammond was taken on a tour of Harlow's traffic hotspots by local Parliamentary candidate Robert Halfon as part of his campaign for a Harlow bypass.

New bus lane aims to leave cars at home

WORK has started on a new public transport link for Harlow which Essex County Council chiefs hope will encourage residents to leave their cars at

Construction of the First Avenue bus lane, which will run from Gilden Way to the Velizy Avenue roundabout, began on Monday.

As well as a new bus lane, the work will also include improvements to bus stops with raised kerbs and real-time information screens. Passengers on the route can expect a bus every 15 minutes.

The county council has also promised new road surfaces, updated underpasses and cycle lane refurbishments.

The first phase of the work will cover the section of the route from Velizy Avenue to the Howard Way roundabout and construction takes place during the off-peak travel hours of 9.30am-4.30pm.

County council highways and transportation cabinet member Norman Hume said: "This is a very important scheme for the people of Harlow and will go a long way to improving the quality of the public transport experience.

"The bus lane will provide a fast and convenient alternative to the car. I am confident in the huge benefits this scheme will offer but ask for the patience of road-users while it is being constructed."

PUBLIC consultations to test local opinion on the future of Harlow's NHS walk-in centre have been branded "ridiculous" after health chiefs admitted they have already chosen their favoured option.

West Essex Primary Care Trust wants to close the existing centre in Wych Elm and transfer services to the accident and emergency department at Princess Alexandra Hospital.

The move, set out in a report to the PCT's board, has now been confirmed by chief executive Aidan Thomas.

But the PCT still plans to press ahead with a consultation exercise, organising four public meetings and distributing a 28-page document.

The consultation exercise will run until Christmas Eve with the public being invited to express views on three options no change to the centre, complete closure with no replacement or the integration of the walk-in centre services with the A&E.

But the PCT has been criticised for spending money on the exercise after one of the options – complete closure – has already been ruled out.

Conservative prospective Parliamentary candidate Robert Halfon accused the PCT

Walk-in centre users can take part in the consultation by calling (01279) 827243 and requesting a copy of the questionnaire. It can also be completed online at www.westessexpct.nhs.uk.

Public meetings over the future of the service take place from 7-9pm on October 18 and November 15 at the PAH lecture theatre, on October 29 in the lecture theatre at St Margaret's Hospital, Epping. and on November 29 at Hatfield Heath village hall.

of "going through the motions".

"This doesn't look like a genuine consultation," he said. "In fact it's pretty much a fait accompli.

"Most people in Harlow want to see the walk-in centre remain as a separate entity because the worry is that if it is merged with the A&E it will lose its identity and gradually disappear without trace."

Mr Thomas confirmed that closing the service was no longer an option and said he favoured the proposal to integrate it with A&E

"(We) did consider the option of closing the walk-in centre but quickly rejected it, being detrimental to the people who use it," he said.

"The walk-in centre is a popular and clinically excellent service. It sees the same type of patients as the A&E department so it makes sense to look at how we can make sure that people get the right care in the right place.

What lurks below the calm surface of Loch Ness?

The search for the fabled beast known as the Loch Ness Monster has captivated generation after generation of intrepid explorers desperately seeking answers to the mystery.

Twenty years ago to this day, a major sonar exploration of the enormous Loch Ness in Scotland failed to show any signs of the creature, once again disappointing those who believe the story to be true.

Legend has it that a huge seacreature measuring 12-15 metres in length with a long neck has been lurking beneath the waters of the Scottish loch since the 6th

There have been many reported sightings of the beast – dubbed "Nessie" – and some people have even taken photographs of unusually shaped creatures they have spotted in the lake.

The most famous of these photos was taken by Colonel Robert Wilson in April 1934. It seemed to show a long-necked creature swimming across the water, but 60 years later experts revealed the picture to be a Descriptions and supposed photos of the beast's long neck have given rise to the theory that it may be a type of prehistoric reptile known as the plesiosaur. But whether we will ever find out for sure what lies beneath the calm waters of Loch Ness remains to be seen. For now, at least, the mystery continues...

Family reunited with help from Stan's book

TWO branches of the same family tree came together for a reunion after a century divided by the Atlantic Ocean. Fred Graeff and his wife Penny, from Seattle in the United States, visited Ruby White, of High Road, North

Mr Graeff's great grandfather, John Nash, was the brother of Mrs White's grandfather James Nash who emigrated to America at the end of the 19th century.

During the visit the relatives looked at old family photographs and caught up on family history before looking at a house in Duck Lane where John Nash, who died in 1924, had lived.

The reunion was helped along by the book A History of North Weald Bassett and Its People written in 1985 by former Harlow and Epping MP Stan Newens.

Mr Newens was invited to the reunion, along with Mr Nash's great great grandson David Foster and his mother Jean.

Mr Newens said he was delighted he had been able to help a family reunite.

"In the past the book has been the means of linking up other families long divided by migration overseas," he said.

Prophesies beyond the '70s kitsch

ABIGAIL'S PARTY

London Classic Theatre Company The Playhouse, Harlow

A SAVAGELY comic critique of the British class system from a master of social satire, director Michael Cabot's exceptional take on Mike Leigh's timeless celluloid gem gave a captivated audience a discomfiting reminder of the turbulent late 1970s.

Enamoured with the good life and seemingly willing to put up with a loveless marriage in order to live it, Beverly (the remarkable Paula Jennings) is the grotesque apotheosis of the priggish class conceit and deluded hauteur that ultimately paved the way for years of Thatcherism and interminable power lunches.Long-suffering husband Laurence (Steve Dineen) trudges home from a turbulent late 1970s. Dineen) trudges home from a hard day at the office, his weary composure soon eroded by Beverly's constant of her three guests – insufferable young newlyweds Angela (Helen Johns) and Tony (the brooding Benjamin Warren), and prim-and-proper mum-of-two Susan (Pauline Whitaker). As Beverley sharpens her cocktail sticks for the assorted guests, undermining and belittling them with the superficial charm of a smiling assassin, Laurence becomes more and more withdrawn, retreating into his crumbling masculinity before taking centre stage for the play's explosive tragicomic climax. Jennings exuded aloof. smouldering menace in a pitch-perfect reprisal of Alison Steadman's role in the 1977 original film; Laurence and Tony's increasingly testy macho sparring was brilliantly realised by Dineen and Warren while Whitaker and Johns expertly articulated the generation chasm between

A strangely prophetic piece; look beyond the cheese-andpineapple, Formica kitsch of the period setting and it becomes starkly clear that Abigail's Party remains acutely relevant to contemporary society's desperate material obsessions and culture of celebrity

Genuine laughs from a top cast

CONFUSIONS

Harlow Theatre Company Victoria Hall, Old Harlow

A FAILING lothario, an affair with the husband's boss, a catastrophic village fete and a mother on the edge of a nervous breakdown made up this well-presented comedy.

The play is split into four vaguely connected acts – originally five – in which playwright Alan Ayckbourn tries to prove that 'there's nowt so queer (or randy) as folk'.

And, contrary to my usual grim reaction to Ayckbourn comedies, this contained some genuine belly laughs, thanks to the odd heavyweight turn.

A success, despite its utter daftness, first act Mother Figure involved a concerned neighbour (Wendy Grant) and her chauvinist husband (Danny Gleeson) checking up on a mother-of-three Lucy (Caroline Petherbridge) who is not answering her profligate husband's phone calls

Okay, it was written in 1974, so the rather naff, outdated clichés on gender politics can be forgiven, particularly as the cast were so good.

Lucy's philandering spouse Harry, played to smarmy perfection by Jamie Anderson, takes up the second act Drinking Companion as he tries to bed a perfume salesgirl (the winsome Sara Green) who shuns his whisky-soused, corny come-ons.

This isn't so much Ayckbourn exploring human nature as more like a sit-com pilot examining English eccentricities and sensibilities, as was the third act, Between Mouthfuls.

Here, businessman Mr Pearce (Bernard Moule, in affable mode) takes his wife (Heather Bygrave) to a fancy restaurant, where they are spotted and avoided by fellow diners Martin (Danny Gleeson) and Polly (Wendy Grant) – Polly later admits she is having an affair with Pearce, Martin's boss. The dialogue skipped between the two tables smoothly, thanks to Jim Thompson's adept direction, and was perfectly linked by the deaf waiter portrayed to a tee by the excellent Rick Finally, Gosforth's Fete ended the quartet with a farcical ham-fest when the eponymous philanthropist leaves the PA system on when being told by his mistress Milly (Marion Clarke) she is pregnant with his child.

Milly's scoutmaster fiancee (Tony Saxby), overhears and hits the bottle while Mrs Pearce is electrocuted giving the opening speech. An enjoyable and rather silly act.

What shortcomings there were can be found in Ayckbourn's script and certainly not in this talented and consistently entertaining company.

EXECUTING sprawling, down-tempo soundscapes with the slow precision of a nightmarish butcher, Harlow's very own stalwarts of the doom metal scene are set to bring their epic melancholy to the masses as they prepare to play their first UK dates in seven years. Having taken their devastating, slothful sound across Europe, the enigmatic three-piece – described as "one of the most respected doom metal bands of all time" by underground webzine Hellride – will begin their eight-date nationwide tour with a warm-up show at

The antithesis to overbearingly frenetic speed metal, Warning's progressive, sinister sound is ominous, slow-burning and melodic heavy rock subscribing to a minimalist aesthetic – like vintage Black Sabbath slowed to a zombified, menacing crawl

"We started out in 1994 and have since become quite prominent in the underground doom metal scene," frontman Patrick Walker told Sound Check. "The UK shows will be our first in seven years so we're really looking forward to them, especially as we're playing alongside one of my favourite bands from the US, Against Nature – it'll be a dream come true!"

Warning play The Square on Thursday at 8pm and tickets are $5 from www.seetickets.com or from the venue on (01279) 305000.

RATATOUILLE

certificate U, running time 1h51m

TAKE a splash of slapstick, a sprinkling of stellar comic talent and a dollop of mouth-watering computergenerated imagery, hand it to Disney/Pixar to mix and – voila – you have the crème de la crème of animated film and this year's sure-fire blockbuster.

A magnificent return to form from the team which bought us 2004's disappointing Cars, this appetising CGI masterpiece will tickle your ribs and pluck at your heartstrings in equal measure.

Like director Brad Bird's previous best The Incredibles, it's a warm-hearted tale of triumph over adversity and mediocrity.

Remy (voiced by Patton Oswalt) is a gifted rat who dreams of becoming France's greatest chef after inspiration from the late, great TV cook Anton Gusteau (Brad Garrett) whose famous motto is "Anyone can cook!"

When the downcast rodent is accidentally swept into a storm drain, he finds himself in the sewer directly below his hero's old restaurant, Gusteau's, which has fallen on hard times since the death of its owner.

Despotic new boss Skinner (Ian Holm) now holds court over the dilapidated premises, which has been demoted from five to three stars after a string of negative reviews.

Worse still, Skinner is using the great Gusteau's name as lucrative branding for his despicable range of sub-standard microwave meals.

The presence of a rat in the kitchen is not exactly welcomed by Skinner, but Remy feels compelled to try to restore the once-great eatery to its former glory and goes about enlisting the help of bungling kitchen porter Linguini (Lou Romano).

Acting as puppeteer in a series of Chaplinesque visual gags that put most live-action comedies to shame, Remy teaches his new charge how to cook a series of exquisite dishes that look likely to reverse the fortunes of the ailing

But when Skinner becomes suspicious of Linguini's new talents and Remy gets paid a visit by his hungry rat brethren, the rodent's well-meaning plans come under threat – just before top critic Anton Ego (the superb Peter O'Toole) books himself a table.

A delicious concoction, this is a beautifully balanced feast of jaw-dropping visuals, laugh-out-loud comedy and poignant heartbreak – make sure you reserve your seat today.

RESIDENT EVIL: EXTINCTION certificate 15, running time 1h34m

WHILE a film based entirely on a computer game is never going to make for an unforgettable celluloid classic, the third instalment of the Resident Evil franchise is nevertheless an obscenely indulgent and rather gratifying zombie gore-fest.

We join our hero Alice (the smouldering Milla Jovovich, pictured above) several years after an outbreak of the deadly T-Virus rendered Raccoon City uninhabitable and began to creep across the continent.

Now mankind's only hope, she encounters a rag-tag band of survivors in the desert and together they set off in search of an uninfected town where they can rebuild the human race – but only if they can overthrow the evil Dr Isaacs (Ian Glen) and his new strain of self-regenerating intelligent mutants.

Formerly of indie also-rans Pimlico, Lewis is now a big hitter on the 'nu-soul revival' scene, and for good reason if this collection of absolute belters is anything to go by. Wolfgang Troys again for an epic

TROY: DIRECTOR'S CUT

(Warner Home Video, 15, retail)

Director cuts too often involve padding out a theatrical feature with scenes swept up from the cutting room floor as a means to get punters to buy the same movie twice, so it's a genuine pleasure to find Wolfgang Petersen taking the opportunity to craft a significantly different and superior movie.

After Gladiator, Troy looked to be the next major plank in a sword-and-sandals revival (which Oliver Stone's risible Alexander cut off prematurely at the knees) and was a handsome if uneven and, at times, unsatisfying lightweight effort, due largely to studio demands concerning running time and certificate. Three years on, Petersen's restored the film to something nearer his original intentions, transforming it into a more measured, almost stately experience. Most importantly, the half-hour or so of new footage adds significant depth to key characters and relationships, particularly to the role of Odysseus (Sean Bean) who has an entirely new introductory scene which more clearly foregrounds him in the narrative and sets a much richer tone for his friendship with Achilles (Brad Pitt).

There's also a stronger sense of the politics underlying the conflict, with Brian Cox's magnificently opportunistic Agamemnon now less a panto villain and more a wily pragmatic statesman.

Elsewhere, the battle scenes have been bloodily beefed up and have a much more brutal impact in the context of Troy's hugely improved pace, a more richly saturated colour palette gives the lush, exotic glow of a myth and the music has been remastered and redeployed to vastly better effect.

Some problems remain – Orlando Bloom's Paris is still a petulant, selfish teen and his passion for Diane Kruger's Helen seldom convinces; the siege of Troy seems to span a long weekend, not a decade; and there remains the nagging feeling that Eric Bana, pictured, while riveting as the noble Hector, would have made for a more convincing Achilles – but, overall, this is a far more rewarding movie.

This two disc set has all the original extras delving into the production process and includes a few new ones in which Petersen discusses his cut and other aspects of the film-making process

Star rating: ★★★★

HAXAN - WITCHCRAFT THROUGH THE AGES

(Tartan Video, 15, retail)

Danish film-maker Benjamin Christensen has some legitimacy to claim to have created the first cult movie in 1922's Haxan, a compelling and often whimsical history of witchcraft based on the medieval text Malleus Maleficarum, or Hammer Of The Witches

Opening in scholarly fashion with a series of woodcuts and other illustrations, Christensen throws himself into a series of stylish, atmospheric tableaux depicting the activities and persecution of witches before closing with some interesting cod psychological explanations for the phenomena. He also gets to play Satan himself in several vivid sequences depicting the Devil and his minions cavorting with witches.

Haxan is a strange, absorbing project that's aged particularly well and Tartan treats it accordingly, releasing it in a high quality print playable with the original soundtrack and two new ones, Geoff Smith's evocative hammered dulcimer score and the industrial dronology of Bronnt Industries Kapital's surreal electronica. There's also the truncated 1968 version of the film narrated by Beat legend William Burroughs, whose lizard-dry tones are perfectly fitted. Star rating: ★★★★

TAKING LIBERTIES

(Revolver Entertainment, 12, retail)

Film-maker Chris Atkins took a cue from the agit-prop documentary style of Mark Thomas for this insightful and alarming look at the extent to which a decade of Blair's New Labour has steadily attacked many of the basic liberties we in the UK take for granted.

Focusing on six basic rights - protest, freedom of speech, privacy, no detention without charge, innocent until proven guilty and prohibition of torture – he picks through a mass of pernicious legislation, testimony and evidence to disclose just how eroded and fundamentally threatened they have become under a government which apparently thinks little of misleading the entire country about the real reasons for war, criminalising peaceful protest, handing its own citizens over to other countries, arresting one of its own party veterans under the Terrorism Act for daring to dissent and making a man cleared in court of any wrongdoing a prisoner in his own home. Drawing on a wealth of testimony from people of all ages, classes and backgrounds, Taking Liberties adds up to a shameful catalogue of deceit and manipulation undermining the very values at the root of our historic national sense of self.

It would leave viewers fuming in despair had it not closed on a more upbeat reminder that it is ordinary people who hold the real powerand that governments should fear us far more than we should fear them.

BREAKING NEWS

(Tartan Asia Extreme, 15, retail)

Hong Kong director Johnny To delivers a breathless, action-packed media satire as a Hong Kong police force embarrassed on live television by losing a shootout with an armed gang sets out to restore public confidence by capturing the gunmen via an elaborate operation orchestrated to spin the press onto its side. But the icy police manipulator (Kelly Chen) comes unstuck when one of her own colleagues decides to take the bad guys down the old fashioned way and events spiral out of control when the official misinformation in countered by the criminals themselves over internet.

The satirical aspects are played out pretty superficially (the media itself is hardly ever shown) and are evidently there to provide some wry humour as the film is overtaken by exquisitely choreographed gun fights and frantic chases.

Star rating: ★★★

ONE LAST DANCE

Tartan Asia Extreme, 18, retail)

Max Makowski's Singapore-made movie plays out like a homage to John Woo's early Hong Kong career in which noble, enigmatic hit men walked lonesome mean streets, befriended cops and met tragic ends. He certainly packs in a lot of visual flourishes (his showy scene dissolves are consistently impressive) but the main attraction is Francis Ng's absorbing performance as the inscrutable assassin T killing his way through a group of inept kidnappers until suspecting his name may ultimately be on the list too. Otherwise, there's a lot of badly misjudged comedy, some cartoonish CG blood sprays and Harvey Keitel in a brief cameo that could have been played by just about anybody.

GETTIN GONE

MV & EE With The Golden Road (album, Ecstatic Peace)

Wild-at-heart nouveau beatniks Matt Valentine and Erika Elder are back with more discordant acid folk lysergic loveliness. Weaving their way back down the mountain after the majestic Green Blues of their Ecstatic Peace debut, this reprises the wistful, wood-smoked Americana and languid psych-blues paeans of its thunderous predecessor. But where freeform jams and loose rhythms prevailed, the duo rein in their rambling roots-rock with a dash of pop sensibility second time around.

UNKNOWN SOLDIER

Jon Amor (album, Boma)

Teasing with snarling, bluesy opener Ball And Chain, Amor's r&b virtuosity begins to wane as he over-eggs his own melancholy. Although there is a real poignancy buried deep within Drowning and Unknown Soldier, inconsequential guest cameos detract from what should have been a primal blues workout.

commitment needed, then we would like to hear from you.

We are looking for a second Learning Adviser to work with students and staff in our Learning Resources Centre, based in the Department of Children, Care and Health. Students work in the Learning Centre on their assignments, both individually and in groups. Your role is to share responsibility for the organisation of the centre, and to support students in finding and making best use of relevant learning resources, in order to complete their work to a high standard. You will work closely with the teachers in the department, as well the Learning Advisers in the Campus Learning Centre.

We are looking for someone who:

- has a successful study history (including English and Maths GCSE) is enthusiastic about learning
- is confident in using IT
- has an interest in making learning resources available to others
- enjoys working with young people
- is a good organiser
- likes to take the initiative

This is an exciting time to join HRC. The college is in the process of rebuilding both its campuses, and the department will be moving into purpose built new facilities in the near future.

CERT Group is the UK's most successful bonded warehouse operator, with a reputation for logistical expertise and attention to detail that is second to none. The key to our success is simple; we care for our customers' brands and products like they are our own, and set the industry standard in storage, delivery and customer service.

With an eye for detail and a willingness to go the extra mile, you'll work perfectly alongside our customer-focussed team and take pride in exceeding expectations at every step of the way. Having previously worked in a warehousing or distribution position, you'll be ready to hit the ground running and have a working knowledge of health and safety regulations. Candidates applying for a supervisory role should also be able to demonstrate previous people management experience.

In return, you can expect a competitive salary and a career with a fast-moving, forward-thinking, market leader.

These are just a selection of the various opportunities available with CERT. We are always looking to strenghten our team, and therefore please send us your CV if you are interested in a particular role which may be available.

To apply, simply email your CV with covering letter to nco@cert.co.uk or post to Neil Cowey, CERT Group, St Martins Road, Hoddesdon, Herts, EN11 OBT.

Sales Negotiator

Salary dependent on experience

North London and Northern Home Counties

When it comes to sales, the Barratt Group have some pretty impressive figures. We build and sell around 14,000 homes every year from apartments for first time buyers to luxury homes in the most prestigious locations.

Our sales team are pivotal to our ongoing success and we are currently looking to recruit Sales Negotiators for our North London Division. Recognising that purchasing a home is often the biggest single outlay most people will ever make, you will build a rapport with potential buyers which will continue throughout the whole buying process. As well as sales and customer care your brief will involve some marketing activities, giving those with the drive to succeed a broad insight into this industry.

The role is often pressurised with targets to meet and high standards to maintain. Therefore you must be an accomplished communicator with a real understanding of customer needs. 'son sales experience can hav gained in any number of business sectors it is essential you have an approach which is positive, professional, friendly and flexible with regard to weekend working.

As a FTSE 100 Company we pride ourselves on looking after our employees and we offer a generous benefits package along with a certificated company training scheme

For more information please send your CV to Christine Scarborough, Sales Director, Barratt North London, Barratt House, Wellstones,

Community Warden – ND0010

£21,243 - £22,215 (pay award pending)

Do you want to make a difference to the quality of life for Harlow's

This is a new post and we are seeking a person who cares about the community and is committed to working with residents, local groups, businesses and partner organisations to reduce anti-social behaviour, environmental crimes and the fear of crime.

Based in the Community Safety Team's Enforcement Section, you will be required to provide a highly visible presence within targeted neighbourhoods of the town, and be able to work with individuals of all ages, as well as groups and agencies in those estates to bring about real improvements to the local environment and a sense of community well-being. A key part of the job will also involve tackling and changing the behaviour of the minority who commit "enviro-crimes" such as littering, fly-tipping and dog fouling, using a mixture of enforcement and education actions.

HOUSING SERVICES

Housing Assistant/ WP OPERATOR

Ref: HSO/07

Based at the Area Housing Office, The Broadway, Loughton Salary: £7,302 - £7,768 pa inclusive (maximum salary increased to £7,923 pa inclusive after a minimum of 5 years' service)

18 hours per week (Mornings)

Can you use a word processor proficiently?

Like dealing with the public?

Sensitive to people's needs and problems?

Able to keep a cool head under pressure?

YES? Then you could be the person we are looking for to play an important team role in our Area Housing Office, based at The Broadway, Loughton.

The principal duty of the job is to provide a typing service to Housing Management staff; therefore keyboard/word processing skills are essential. You would also be required to support the receptionist, in covering the Housing Reception and be the first point of contact for tenants visiting the office to discuss housing matters. This could be to report a repair, discuss rent arrears, apply for a transfer, or any other issues our clients may wish to raise. You would also undertake clerical duties including answering the telephone, photocopying, dealing with post and filing. Most importantly you need to be keen, enthusiastic and above all, flexible. This post does not attract a relocation package.

CLERICAL ASSISTANT (ASSETS)

Motability is a national charity which is committed to meeting the mobility needs of disabled people. It directs and oversees the Motability Scheme - the UK's leading car scheme for disabled people. Since it was set up by the government in 1977, it has helped to provide millions of people with affordable, convenient, trouble-free motoring. Currently, over 460,000 disabled people and their families choose to use the Motability Scheme.

SQL Database Developer

Salary range £30,000 to £35,000 per annum Benefits package includes: 26 days annual holiday, BUPA private medical insurance and pension scheme

Reporting to the IT Manager you will be developing and supporting our Microsoft databases in line with our IT strategy. Your duties will include the development of enterprise reporting services and data modules for management information purposes and working alongside the .Net Developer to create and support web services between our new application system and database resources. You will be responsible for ensuring all databases are backed up and recoverable to support the business continuity plan.

Applicants should have substantial experience in database development projects to ISO SQL standards; developing SQL 2000/2005; MS Access; Transact SQL; VB6; VB Script etc and Windows 2000/2003 environments supporting MS SQL databases. A MCDBA qualification is desirable.

Secretary to the Grants Director

Starting Salary £20,019 per annum

Benefits package includes: 26 days annual holiday, BUPA private medical insurance and pension scheme.

The job holder will provide a full secretarial service to the Grants Director and Grants Management Team. Duties will include word processing, minute taking, making appointments/travel arrangements and maintaining diaries.

You will need to have experience in a similar role preferably in a service environment, first class secretarial skills and shorthand/typing qualifications (minimum 100/150 wpm). A working knowledge of the Microsoft Office Suite is

Closing date for receipt of completed applications for both roles: 22 October 2007

Essex County Council (5)

ESSEX COUNTY COUNCIL, FIRST AVENUE, HARLOW INSTALLATION OF BUS LANE & GENERAL HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Essex County Council will be installing a bus lane on First Avenue, in the Town of Harlow, in the District of Harlow between Gilden Way to Velizy Avenue and generally improving the highway at this location.

Works are about to commence and will be broken down into 2 phases:

- Phase 1 Velizy Avenue to Howard Way
- Phase 2 Howard Way to Gilden Way

Expected completion dates are Summer 2008 for Phase 1 and Summer 2009 for Phase 2, though some overlap may occur. Formal consultation for the Bus Lane traffic restriction will then occur.

The works will see the current road layout widened and improved to modern standards. The pedestrian subways at Park Lane and The Gowers will also be refurbished.

The works will reduce the available road width whilst work is carried out on one side at a time and occasionally traffic will need to be controlled by traffic lights. This is expected to cause severe delays to travel in the surrounding area. Early warning signs on First Avenue and key approach roads to Harlow will advise road users of the situation.

General working hours will be restricted to 9.30am to 4.30pm to alleviate the worst effects. However as sections are completed, the whole carriageway will be resurfaced, requiring overnight closures. Alternative routes will be available and prior formal notification given at these times.

Some side roads will need to be closed for short periods of time to allow the improvement works to proceed. Alternative access arrangements will be available and prior formal notification given.

We will pay particular attention to pedestrian safety, but we would ask pedestrians and drivers to respect the road works signs and directions; to use signed routes; and to generally take care. Subways and pelican crossings will remain operational and should be used. It may be unsafe to use uncontrolled crossings and at times these will be closed and the centre islands removed.

For more information concerning the planned works please contact lan Turner on 01245 437551.

Star Sport asks if the blueprint to tackle soccer indiscipline can work?

By Sports Editor Alan Scott scotta@hertsessexnews.co.uk

ICTURE the scene. A striker for a Saturday or Sunday men's team has just had a goal disallowed, he believes unfairly.

So he turns to the man in black, says 'excuse me, my good fellow' and promptly rushes off to the other end of the pitch to have a chat with his captain and centrehalf.

Said skipper then runs to the opposite end of the pitch to speak to the referee about the disallowed goal.

Sounds ridiculous doesn't it? Well, if FA chief Brian Barwick has his way that would be the norm in the Harlow & District League, the Harlow Star Youth Community League and beyond!

It's one of the key parts of a new blueprint the FA has introduced to target discipline in the beautiful game. In January, a pilot scheme will be launched, which will see only the captains of teams permitted to speak to referees.

It will also introduce a system to rope off the pitches at children's matches to stop abusive parents and spectators venting their spleen at referees.

The final measure is a 'memorandum of understanding' — a contract signed by clubs, players and parents, aimed at improving discipline in all levels of the game.

If successful, the schemes will be introduced at all standards of the game.

The governing body hopes it can start with parks football and work its way up to the Premiership. One could say it has got it 'backside upwards'!

But the FA is right to do something to try and tackle the lack of discipline and respect for match officials.

And in children's football, you even have the crazy situation where some parents are dishing out abuse to officials.

But should the football clubs target this problem?

And in men's football, the brickies, chippies, plasterers and so on will simply not think about what they are doing and hold their tongue, while heading for their captain to intervene.

So how do you stop it without introducing a red card epidemic?

Terry Rackley, the chairman of the Harlow Referees Society, has mixed feelings over the plans.

He says officials have a tough task in dealing with young men. "We have no control of a group of lads that go out clubbing on a Saturday night and then play football on the Sunday morning," he said.

"Unlike professional leagues we can't tell them to have an early night."

The lack of respect for referees has forced many out of the game in Harlow and the surrounding area.

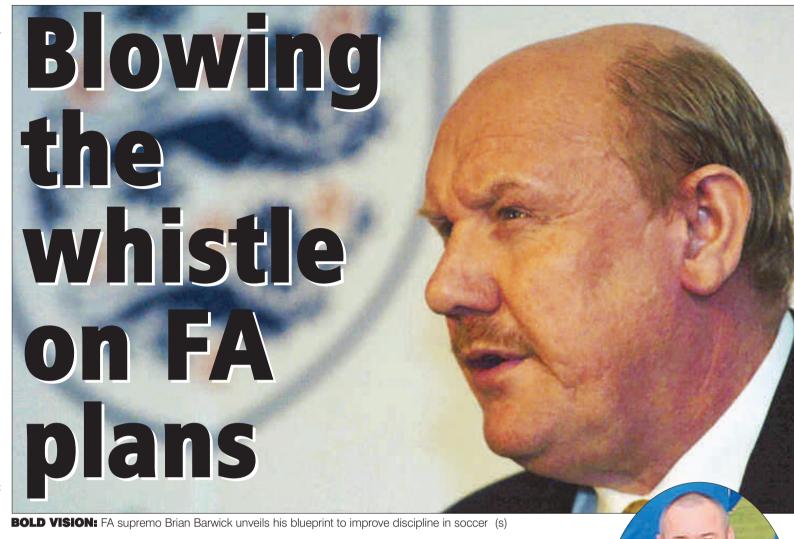

"We had 20 games listed last week but only EIGHT referees to cover them. Ask yourself why?

"They are constantly criticised, abused, threatened and on the odd occasion physically assaulted," said Rackley.

"Only last week we had a senior referee verbally abused and threatened while leaving a car park!

"I know all leagues and referees are subject to loutish behaviour and abuse."

Rackley says having just two players—both captains—as the only players able to approach the ref can only work at a senior level. "I can't see a player running up to his captain and saying 'can you ask the ref why he gave that penalty?'."

Rackley believes some parents are setting a poor example for their children when watching them play. "The kids just want to play football and rarely get involved in anything. A parent will see his son go down injured and shout abuse at the offending player, which will then bring his mum and dad into the equation. The referee will then be abused for allowing 'little Johnny' to get hurt.

"Some pitches in Harlow have got a white line around the pitches, to stop parent/spectator encroachment. This has no effect.

"I cannot see Harlow Council paying for roped areas unless on private pitches. They will be pulled down or damaged. I think it's unworkable."

oth the Harlow & District League and the Harlow Referees Society refuse to tolerate any abuse of match officials — and offending players are dealt with severely.

The referees that turn out week in, week out come rain or shine deserve tremendous respect. "They give up their free time to referee matches. Well done and thanks to you all," said Rackley.

Bob Earll, development officer for the Harlow Star Youth Community League, who is also a referee, says the FA has got it wrong in thinking that the problems of abuse towards referees can be solved by starting at grass-roots level.

He says youngsters are influenced by what they see on Match of the Day.

"The FA can start solving the problem of abuse from the top by showing that the professional game will not tolerate abuse towards officials and this will spiral down to grass roots.

"Television can be a great tool in educating the younger players."

He says the clubs themselves must ensure that managers and coaches lead the way by showing respect towards officials and opponents. They also need to make parents aware of what is and what is not acceptable behaviour.

"Parents and others on the sidelines need to realise that their behaviour not only causes annoyance to the referee but in most cases causes the boys playing distress as well," Earll said.

"The idea of roping off pitches is a good one although I am not sure how practical it might be, but from experience it's a more enjoyable game to referee and for players to play in when games such as cup finals are held and the spectators are some distance away."

The Harlow Star League has again suffered a drop in the number of referees, while younger officials fell pressurised by managers and coaches. Earll added: "People need to realise that if we cannot keep our younger referees, games will eventually have no officials."

Former Harlow Town striker Marc Das has seen the game from all angles. After a successful spell at the CONCERN: Harlow Referees Society chairman Terry Rackley Sportcentre in the 1980s, he is now manager of Ridgeons League side Saffron Walden Town.

Das agrees that football is a passionate game and cannot see how the FA schemes can work. "A lot of this happens in the heat of the moment. The adrenalin is flowing. The referee might make a decision which you feel is wrong.

"It's like that rule about not taking you shirt off when you've scored a goal. When you're on a high you don't think about it.

"With kiddies' football you are shouting and raving because you want your child to do well. I just know I never want to be a ref or a linesman — it's a no-win situation."

Certainly you cannot question the motives of Barwick, who has introduced this blueprint. "I have taken it upon myself as one of my own aspirations while I'm in this job is to improve behaviour on the field of play of footballers to referees," he said

"It's the young people who represent the future of the game and we will ingrain them with good behaviour. It's not going to change overnight but we're working very hard at it."

I myself have strong reservations about whether the schemes will work, but certainly the players — from Premiership stars to grass roots adult and junior teams — are pivotal.

MARK HALL YOUTH U- By JOSHUA BRUCE 11's stormed back from 4-1 down to beat RISDEN WOOD 8-4 in the Harlow Star Youth Community League.

On target were Sam Bullard, Lewis Bridge (4), Daniel Florido, Carl Spence, plus a penalty from Jordon Spowart.

HARLOW TOWN COLTS U-11s won 7-0 against LANGLEY COLTS TROJANS in the Harlow Star Youth Community League Cup.

Scorers were John Jo Boulter, Jake Tobin, Michael Fiddler, Charlie Rider (2) and Tyla Samson (2).

WARE FC U-11s moved into the second round of the league cup.

The team, who play their home matches at The Link in Harlow, triumphed 8-0 against APEX.

Connor Ellis hit a hat-trick, and Frankie Branch and Jack Reid both scored twice. Darren Brooker completed the scoring for the hosts.

LANGLEY COLTS STALLIONS ran out 10-0 victors at Harlow Town Reds. Finding the net were Luke Crichton (2), Zak Norris (2), Tom Ryan (3), Tom Farrington, Charles Branston and Ben Clark.

In the U-12's league, LANGLEY COLTS TROJANS won the derby with club-mates LANGLEY COLTS MUS-TANGS. Luke Preston hit a hat-trick and Daniel Pardoe also scored in the 4-3 win, while Gregory Wright (2) and Risden keeper Kai Tarling made three top-notch penalty saves, but his team-mates could only convert two out of six spot-kicks.

LANGLEY COLTS TROJANS U-9's also went through. They beat HAR-LOW TOWN WHITES 3-0 with strikes from Connor Quinn, Jamie Waters and Jordan Newborough.

MARK HALL U-9s were the victors of a close encounter over EPPING, with the score at the end of normal time 1-1. The Mark Hall players saved their best football for extra-time to win 3-1. Charlie Shaves, Owen Goddard and Magnus Koskocan scored for Mark Hall.

LANGLEY COLTS STALLIONS U-8's won 5-1 at Elsenham. On target were Ronnie Bird, Michael Pardoe (2), George Jefferies and Max Fletcher.

In the Essex County Girls League, HARLOW TOWN U-16's won 22-1 against Wickford Town.

Jemma Good hit six goals, while there were hat-tricks from Steff Barker, Ella Serer and Becky Taylor and two goals apiece for Shelby Hatt, Dempsey Favell and Chloe Godleman. Rosie Cavalier completed the scoring.

Colts praised at presentation night

THE efforts of Epping's Cricket Club's youngsters were recognised when a colts oresentation night was held.

> The season began with no colts but there are now 25 aged between 8- and 14years-old attending training sessions on Friday nights at Lower Bury Lane.

No competitive matches were played by the juniors but there is certainly talent, with 13-year-old all-rounder Bradley Sheridan being one to note for the future. He played Epping's deputy mayor Ben Murphy presented the awards to the players.

Epping hope to have U-11 and U-13 teams competing in the West Essex Cricket Board League in 2008.

It also plans to develop the clubhouse, nets and build a link road for year-round access to the

New boys head top in premier division

NEW boys Old Town Athletic head the premier division in the Harlow & District League after defeating GPCA 3-2, writes PAŬL GROVES.

They gained revenge for their opening defeat to GPCA.

Rouge Lyon are second after a 2-2 draw with Marquis Sports, while Parndon Royals remain unbeaten following a 2-1 victory over Risden Wood.

In division one, Pollards gained their first points of the season with a cracking 8-0 win over New Town Rangers and GPCA Reserves gained a 5-4 success over Old Townmead.

Division two pace-setters Pools and FC Parkside continued winning runs with victories over Atletico UG and Rouge Lyon reserves, while Eastwick Lions gained their first win this season by beating A&A United Galaxy took a 3-0 win over Barnes and Rhyno come out 5-2 victors against Marquis Sports reserves.

St Germaine beat Talento 3-2, while Risden Wood A's 1-0 win over over table-toppers Brookside kept up their unbeaten record.

UG moved into third spot with a 2-1 victory over Matching United in division three.

Dynamo head division four after a fantastic 2-1 victory over FC Clark. Boland and Drayton netted a goal each in a game which saw Dynamo finish with 10 men after Broad was injured.

Broadley Common come out 3-1 winners over Ashfield who are still searching for their first points of the season. Broadley squandered a number of chances but a cracking volley from Woolard was the highlight.

Ashfield never gave up and a last-minute goal was reward for their efforts.

Abbey Albion won the Townmead derby with a comfortable 3-0 victory, while Langley Legends crushed Cottingham 5-1.

Division five sees Eppaldo and Epping lead the way, both continuing unbeaten runs with Eppaldo defeating Brookside reserves 4-1. Payne had given Brookside a half-time lead. Epping defeated Stewards Spartans 4-2.

The biggest winners of the weekend were Rouge Lyon A, who smashed Archers Dart Matching United reserves took a 4-2 victory over Altham Grove Reserves.

Rider on the storm

A HARLOW schoolgirl has taken the first steps towards realising her dream of competing for Great Britain in a dressage competition at the Olympic Games.

Mark Hall Sports College student Harriette Williams (11) represented the Eastern Region in a national tournament in July.

She came seventh in her individual event and her team was placed third overall.

Subsequently she came second at a UK-wide competition at Writtle in Essex for dressage riders. Harriette comes from a family with an equine background - she started riding at just four years of Her father Michael is a farrier, while her mother Caroline is also a keen rider.

Mrs Williams said: "She works very hard and dedicates herself to constantly improving. She has a sixth sense and she understands them [horses].

"Everybody can be taught to a certain level but beyond that you have to have natural talent and dedication to be above the majority."

Harriette's chances of going far in the sport are helped by her receiving top instruction.

Jill Day, a former Great Britain international rider, gives Harriette extra tuition at her riding centre in Hastingwood.

Harriette is also on her school's list of talented children which means she can take time off to train.

Mrs Williams added: "Mark Hall is very forward thinking — they bend over backwards to help.

"If you do not give the youngsters time to practice you will not have the stars.

Equestrianism is an expensive sport to be involved in and Harriette gets vital backing from the veterinary practice, The Acorn Equine Clinic.

Its principal Conor Fenelon is himself a keen horseman. He has provided special competition clothing for Harriette and rugs for her pony Hinliffe Magnum, known in competition as Magnum.

Mr Fenelon also provides veterinary care, including vaccinations, an expensive part of the sport.

He said: "I know Harriette and her family well and am impressed at the commitment she is showing to her training and involvement in competition.

"She has great talent and a real will to succeed."

Mrs Williams added: "We really appreciate the support that Conor and his team at the Acorns Equine Veterinary Clinic are giving her. It's a real boost."
